

Discover The Timeless Beauty Secret: Moroccan Black Soap

From Ancient Rituals to Global Skincare Routines

Deep in the heart of Moroccan hammams, generations of women have passed down a secret—Beldi Soap, known globally as Moroccan Black Soap.

A thick, pasty blend of olive pulp, oil, and eucalyptus, this dark-greenish soap isn't just a cleanser—it's a cultural ritual, a moment of self-care that connects body and soul.

It all started centuries ago in Fez and Marrakech, where local artisans crafted this soap using ancestral recipes. Over time, Moroccan women adopted it into their weekly hammam rituals, using it to deeply purify the skin and prepare it for exfoliation with the traditional Kessa glove. Today, that same time-honored formula is making waves in spas, homes, and wellness routines worldwide.

“The roots of Moroccan Black Soap trace back to authentic hammam rituals”
